<Retelling 例>

Your friend : Hey, what book are you reading?

You : Oh, hi. This is a biography of Bruce Edwards.

Your friend : Bruce Edwards? Is he a golfer?

You : No. He was a well-known caddy, and passed away at age 49.

Your friend : A caddy?

You : Um, you know, caddy is a person who helps a golfer by carrying his or her clubs and equipment during a game.

Your friend : I see. But why is he so famous?

You : He caddied for this golfer, Tom Watson. He was a Bruce's lifelong partner. In those days, caddies used to just carry the golf bag for the players. But Bruce had another idea. He thought that caddies had to tell the players about the course condition and the distance to the holes no matter where they are.

Your friend : Then, he gave advice to Watson so it would be easier for him to play?

You : Yes, but what was special about him was he was never afraid to disagree with Watson. At one occasion, Watson followed Bruce's advice and made a good shot.

Your friend : That's a good story. They trusted each other, right?

Your friend : Yes, they did.
